Rudy Giuliani's "My Cousin Vinny" Performance Re Voter Fraud Caused Hair Dye to Melt in Real Time

Trump's sycophantic lawyer decided to hold a desperate press conference in which, among other things, he's been claiming that it is the job of Pennsylvania to prove their election ballots were legal. What an illegal ballot is, I have no idea. It's just another term crybabies on the right have come up with to justify daddy Trump's lose. That said, the 9/11 lawyer's meltdown was more than just metaphoric, it became quite literal.

> As the press conference proceeded, an increasingly sweaty Giuliani repeatedly wiped his brow as what appeared to be dark hair dye started streaming down his face.

He also began acting out a scene from a 90s movie, with a bad imitation of Joe Pesci.

> He started to explain the scene in question, in which a witness claims to have seen the alleged crime at the center of the story. Then, in an exceedingly poor imitation of Joe Pesci, Giuliani barked, "How many fingers have I got up?" The woman gets it wrong because "she was too far away" to see. "These people were further away than My Cousin Vinny was from the witness," he added, referring to Republican poll watchers. "They couldn't see a thing!" From there, he randomly started accusing Joe Biden of committing "crimes" without laying out evidence or specifics.

Clearly, Republicans are getting incredibly desperate and even Tucker Carlson has jumped ship. Enough is enough and these people have to retain some semblance of credibility, even after four years of defending Trump religiously.
